

Free masks available in newspaper boxes in Pittsburgh

Updated: 9:14 PM EDT May 11, 2020

PITTSBURGH —A new initiative will help people in Pittsburgh who don't have a mask to get one for free.

Newspaper boxes with masks inside that are free for the taking have been placed at Pittsburgh police stations. (See the boxes in the video player above.)

"We've partnered with Global Links to provide masks at all of our duty locations," Police Chief Scott Schubert said. "It's called, 'If you need a mask, take a mask.' Just simply come grab one." Ten thousand masks have been donated. They are individually wrapped and will be available while supplies last at city police zone stations, and at the Downtown and Northview Heights substations.